

Code of Conduct

Here at the Bosco Centre you are safe, cared for and we want you to belong.

In order to do this:

We will show that we value each other through our language and behaviour. We will value the diversity (the differences) among ourselves, in gender, culture, ethnicity, beliefs, sexuality and disability.

We will value each person's property and the property of the Centre, by not borrowing something without permission, using equipment carefully and putting it away in its proper place after use.

We listen to each other respectfully and try to resolve conflicts amicably and certainly without violence in word or action.

We welcome visitors and first-time users to the Centre in a friendly way.

The Reflection/Goodnight times are special times for listening to each other, and we expect all staff and members to value this and take part in it.
